Four faculty members from the Faculty of Education at Bar-Ilan University are set to visit the University of Kassel in Germany. Their mission is to forge stronger collaborative ties with their academic counterparts and the institution's leadership. The delegation's agenda includes meetings with the President, the Head of the Internationalization Department, and the Head of the Equality Unit.

They will also liaise with senior academics from various programs at the University of Kassel, particularly the Sociology of Diversity and Education Management programs. A significant part of their visit includes participation in a research seminar and joint activities at the renowned International Center for Higher Education Studies (INCHER), which is housed within the University of Kassel.

All these engagements aim to set the stage for a deeper international partnership between the two universities.

Funding for the delegation was generously provided by the European Union, Erasmus+ program.
